

Practical PHILOSOPHY

A 12 week introductory course of lectures

This introductory course of practical philosophy is based on the great teachings of the past and present.

The course has been designed for those wishing to gain an understanding of Philosophy, the meaning of man's existence, the purpose of life and the art of self knowledge. It studies the fundamental questions of human existence, one's place in the world, the unifying factors of thought, feeling and action, the relation of art, science and religion, and the formative and disruptive forces in human life.

Students are asked neither to accept nor reject what they hear, but rather to test it for themselves in the light of their own experience.

New course begins

Thursday 31st January 2008

For more information or a brochure phone 4929 3404

or

email; philosnewcastle@optusnet.com.au

School of Philosophy

Level 2, 110 Hunter Street, Newcastle
